Porz-Royen is a town in Südwestfalen, Germany. It is located in the county of Mecklenburg-Vorpommern. The town of Porz-Royen lies in the Lower Saxony region (North Germany). Porz-Royen is located in the canton of Romsloh-Wittstock, which is located in the administrative district of Ostholstein. Since the amalgamation of the town of Böhme-Mehlem-Nord in 2007, Porz-Royen is located in the district of Radbruch. In 1829, in the town of Porz-Royen, a station for the railway line between Hamburg and Hannover was opened. The starting points of this railway line, which runs north-east to the south-west of the city, were Böhme-Mehlem Nord and Böhme-Mehlem-Süd. Until today, this station remains as the northern terminus of the Hannover–Mecklenburg-Vorpommern railway line. History of Porz-Royen The history of Porz-Royen is closely related to that of the neighbouring Mecklenburg-Vorpommern region. The government and economy of the city were handed to Mecklenburg-Vorpommern from 1815 to 1866. The town was renamed Mecklenburg in 1866, and in 1932, following the re-organisation of the state and the reorganisation of the railway network, it changed its name to Mecklenburg-Vorpommern. The history of Porz-Royen began in the 14th century, with the founding of the village by the Franconian settlers. The name of the village was already mentioned in 1239, as "P
